Closely following our announcement that a Central Vermont train into this city had beaten the schedule by three minutes came one of those periodic derailings on the Williamstown branch of the same road. It doesn't pay to shower the Central with too lavish praise, apparently.

Proctor hasn't answered the Vermont Branch, A. P. of L., and Clement has answered that he will do about as he pleases, which leads the Vermont Union Signal to the opinion that one is as bad as the other, although it does admire Clement's manly stand in openly stating his position. Really, now, why doesn't Proctor say something? He might say "Seat" or "Ski-doo," at least, and let us know that he is still there.

BARRE'S POOR.

With only two persons being entirely cared for by the city at the present time, Barre does not seem to be in a position to enter into a consolidated poor farm with other communities in the county. This number is probably about the minimum, but the number rarely runs as large as that reported by Northfield with eleven or Montpelier with eight or nine. Most of the poor in Barre prefer to do what they can to be as near self-supporting as possible. And no one will say that it is not a worthy ambition. If they wish to do work that shall prevent the necessity of their being taken to the poor farm, they should be given the opportunity, as at present. If the poor and the semi-poor of Barre were to be placed on a consolidated farm, located perhaps away from the city, the semi-poor would be deprived of the chance to assist in their maintenance, for, with their withdrawal from a thriving center, would be removed from them the various little chances which arise to earn more or less money. This city offers places to work, which would not be available in the smaller communities. It is apparent, too, that it would be unbusiness-like for the city to maintain a poor department with other towns and still maintain a poor department at home.

as would be necessary if those who were able to be partly self-supporting were to be given a chance to earn money. Either we must drive them all—the entirely destitute and partially self-supporting—onto the consolidated poor farm or we must continue to run our poor department independently, as now. And all can see that it would be a manifest injustice to compel the partially self-supporting widows with children to go to this common farm with those who are entirely incapable of work. The feelings of these people who by misfortune may be in part dependent upon the charity of the public are to be considered.

For some of the communities we should say that the consolidated poor farm might be beneficial, as well as humane, but for the present peculiar conditions in Barre the independent method appears the better policy.

These Companies Are Stable.

N. B. Ballard & Co. are in receipt of advice from their companies interested in the San Francisco calamity and under the most liberal allowances for losses none of them will be shaken in their stability.

The Fireman's Fund which has its Home Office in San Francisco have wired the Eastern office as follows: "Sacramento, Cal., April 21, 1906. Chas. W. Kellogg, Manager, Boston, Mass.

All hands safe and well. Fire now extinguished. Unable to ascertain liabilities until vaults are open, but we pay in full. Fireman's Fund flag is still flying and nailed to the mast.

"Wm. J. Dutton, President." This information will, no doubt, be interesting to the many policyholders in this city.

UNION MEN OF BARRE, ATTENTION!

If you believe that Union men in other trades have the same right to an eight-hour day and fair and sanitary conditions as you have, you should be at all times willing to help them along in that direction. When purchasing Union-made Dress Shirts call on A. A. Smith & Bro., the Union Clothing Co. and Segal & Brady. We do not patronize the Cruel-Feet body or Lion brands.

CALL FOR THE UNION LABEL.

THE TRUE TEST

The wearing of a Shoe is the only true test. Buy a pair of "Dorothy Dodd" Shoes and you will be surprised at their snug, faultless fit, at the lightness they impart to your gait, at their handsome, shapely appearance and distinctive style. You will no longer feel that drag to your step, that dead weight, that tired feeling. There is no article of dress that can thwart a woman's plans, interfere with her pleasure or irritate the mind like an ill-fitting shoe. Wear a "Dorothy Dodd" and forget your foot troubles.
